

Introduction

Hanyu 漢語 Pinyin 拼音

Mandarin (Hanyu 漢語) Pinyin 拼音(pin-spelling yin-sound) was approved in 1958 and adopted in 1979 by the Chinese government. Since then, pinyin has been accepted by the Library of Congress, The American Library Association, and most international institutions as the transcription system for Mandarin.

In 1979 the International Organization for Standardization (ISO) adopted pinyin as the standard Romanization for Modern Chinese."

There are four full tones in Mandarin pronunciation, and one neutral tone.

	The first tone is marked as a straight line like this ˊ . It has a long and sustained sound (as if singing a note)
	The second tone is marked upwards like this ˊ . It is a rising tone (start from the lower part of your voice, then go up).
	The third tone is marked down and up like this ˇ . It is a low and curved tone. Try to go as low as you can and then bounce up.
	The fourth tone is marked downwards like this ˋ . It is a falling tone (start from the grating highest part of your voice, then go down, as if exclaiming).
	The neutral tone has no mark. It is a short and light tone.

1st	dā	mā	High and level.
